"the sparkly Zerbinetta of soprano Alexandra Nowakowski...also stood out in the WNO Domingo-Cafritz Young Artist program in the last two years. She finessed the coloratura demands of the aria 'Grossmächtige Prinzessin' with panache and airy nuance, as refreshing as a gin fizz...Nowakowski also brought strength and sincerity to the touching duet with the Composer in the first act."—Washington Classical Review

"Alexandra Nowakowski possesses a meatier sound than one normally hears from Zerbinetta — a welcome change in a role than can easily turn squally. She shows no trouble reaching the aria's stratospheric (and sustained) Es and Fs, finishing the showpiece with stamina to burn."—Broad Street Review

"The light comes due to the illusive, magical gorgeous unicorn sung with dazzling virtuosity by Alexandra Nowakowski, whose airy notes turn into gossamer and disappear, as she does, into the atmospheric night."—DC Theatre Scene

"Soprano Alexandra Nowakowski...was appropriately demure as the mystical Unicorn. Her entrance delighted the children in the house, a disco ball illuminating her white costume and the whole theater with sparkling flecks of light. Her coloratura exploits in the second act were a vocal highlight."—Washington Classical Review

"...Alexandra Nowakowski's lovely Gilda...Delicate, fresh, pure as an angel in heaven as the Duke says, the young woman seduced us with her voice, her musicality, her tender acting, and her class."—Concert Classic

"Gilda, played by Alexandra Nowakowski, delivers a very good, distinct performance. The young American singer has a voice with an exquisite timbre, capable of delicious vocalises ('Gualtier Malde')...she finds her place in the charming duos with Rigoletto...but also in the ravishing quartet of Act 3."—Olyrix

"The young Alexandra Nowakowski...is an assured Gilda. The voice is well placed and projects well, with impeccable breath control that assures accurate high notes (the 'Caro nome' is executed with clear diction, and the voice remains in the same placement). It is without a doubt that of the three protagonists she is the one who possesses the most vocal maturity. A beautiful Gilda."—Wanderer

"Alexandra Nowakowski more than filled out the demands of this exhilarating stretch — trills, runs, its own cadenza, and a spectacular high D near the end."—The Philadelphia Inquirer

"Alexandra Nowakowski is delightful as the salacious Zerbinetta, tossing off her high E's and her trills with aplomb."—The Cultural Critic

"Alexandra Nowakowski (Zerbinetta) has a lovely lyric soprano with the top notes and flexibility this fiendishly difficult role requires; she's also an engaging actress...she shaped the line very gracefully."—Philadelphia Magazine

"Alexandra Nowakowski's Zerbinetta offered some lovely vocalism. Impressive."—Opera News

"Alexandra Nowakowski — a lyric soprano with a remarkable range of dynamic shadings — was a dark-voiced, attractive heroine, thoroughly admirable vocally and dramatically."—Opera UK

"Nowakowski commanded with her warm upper range."—Philadelphia Magazine

"Nowakowski in particular gave a searching, dramatic interpretation of every phrase, culminating in 'Dulcissime': 'Sweetest one, I give myself to you totally!' This has to be one of the most passionate utterances in great music, and Nowakowski delivered with pure, splendid perfection." —Broad Street Review

"[Nowakowski] sang with both power and lyricism."—Chestnut Hill Local

"Well-cast Alexandra Nowakowski (Sophie) was a vocally bright presence."—The Philadelphia Inquirer
